

Awaken Discovery

The Teacher Realignment System

Support for Anxiety, Overthinking, and Emotional Overload in Teaching

Helping You Come Back to Yourself — Before, During, and After the School Day

Ally Donoghue

The Teacher Realignment System

Support for Anxiety, Overthinking, and Emotional Overload in Teaching

Before You Start...

If you're here...

there's a good chance your day doesn't end when the bell goes.
Your mind keeps going...

your body still feels switched on... or something from the day is still sitting with you.

Teaching isn't just about what you do.
It's what you carry.

The conversations...
the responsibility...
the pressure to stay steady...
even when it feels a lot.

And most of the time...
there isn't space to process any of it.

So it follows you home.

This is where this system comes in.

Not to fix everything.

But to give you a way to move through the day...
and gently come out of it.

You don't need to do it perfectly.

Even a small shift... can change how things feel.

How to Use This

This isn't something to complete.

It's something to return to.

You can use this in the moments you need it:

Before school → to steady yourself

During the day → when things start to build

After school → to leave the day behind

In the evening → to release what you're carrying

At night → to help you switch off

You don't need to do everything.

Even one page...

one moment...

one small pause...

is enough.

The Going Home Method

This system follows four simple steps:

Air  – Clear your mind

Fire  – Reset your body

Water  – Process what you're carrying

Earth  – Close the day

You don't need to move through them in order.

You just begin where you need it most.

Sometimes that might be your thoughts...

sometimes your body...

sometimes something emotional that's stayed with you.

And you can return to it...

whenever you need to come back to yourself.

Start where you are.

Clearing the Mental Load

After a full day of teaching... your mind doesn't just stop.

It keeps going...
replaying lessons...
thinking about conversations...
remembering things you didn't get to...

Trying to hold everything at once.

This is where things start to feel heavier...
more overwhelming...
harder to switch off.

You don't need to organise anything yet.

Just begin by creating space.

You don't have to hold it all at once.

Just Notice...

Before writing anything... take a moment to check in:

What feels most present in your mind right now?

Is it:

- something unfinished
- something replaying
- something you're worrying about

You don't need to change it.

Just notice it...
and then begin.

Awareness creates space.

Get It Out of Your Head

This isn't about doing it neatly.

It's about getting everything out.

so your mind doesn't have to hold it.

Write down anything that's there:

- tasks
- thoughts
- worries
- reminders
- things replaying

No structure.

No filtering.

No judgement.

Just let it out.

Let your mind empty onto the page.

Everything That's There

You don't have to hold it all.

Air

What Needs Your Attention?

Now take a quick look at what you've written.

Not everything here needs your energy right now.

Gently sort:

- Needs doing

- ~ Can wait

- Doesn't need carrying

You're not solving everything.

Just seeing it more clearly.

Clarity reduces pressure.

Sort It Gently...

Needs Doing

~ Can Wait

Let It Go

Not everything belongs with you.

When Your Mind Keeps Looping

If your thoughts keep circling...
pause here....

Ask yourself:

- Can I act on this right now?
- Or is this just repeating?

If yes → write one next step

If no → allow it to wait

You don't need to keep thinking to stay in control.

You can step out of the loop.

One Small Step

One small next step (if needed):

Or:

This can wait.

Small steps are enough.

Air

Let This Be Enough

Your mind will always try to hold everything.

But you don't have to carry it all at once.

Some things can wait.....

Some things will pass.....

Some things don't need your energy anymore.....

Even a small amount of space... can change how everything feels.

Space changes everything.

Pause...

Take a breath before moving on...

There's no rush.

Coming Back Into Your Body

After a day of teaching...
it's not just your mind that keeps going.

Your body does too.

Holding tension...
staying alert...
ready to respond...

Often without you even noticing.

You might feel it as:
a heaviness...
tightness...
restlessness...
or that wired but tired feeling...

This is your body staying “on” after the day has finished.

You don't need to force it to relax.

Just begin by noticing it.....

Your body is allowed to soften.

Just Notice Your Body

Before changing anything... just check in.

Where do you feel the day in your body?

You might notice it in:

- your shoulders
- your neck
- your chest
- your stomach
- your hands

Or just a general sense of tension.

You don't need to fix it.

Just notice it.

Awareness begins the shift.

Let It Move

Now, instead of holding everything still... let your body move slightly.

You might:

- roll your shoulders
- stretch your arms
- shift your position
- take a slower breath out

Nothing big.

Just enough to remind your body it doesn't have to stay "on".

Small movements create release.

What Do You Notice?

You might want to note:

- where you felt tension
- what shifted
- what felt different

Even a small shift is enough.

Slowing It Down

Your body has been in “go mode” all day.

So instead of trying to stop everything...
just slow it slightly.

Take one breath in...

And let your next breath out be slower.

Longer.....

Softer....

Do that again.

And just notice what happens....

Your body can begin to settle.

Let This Be Enough

Your body doesn't need a complete reset.

It just needs a moment.

A small shift...
a little less tension...
a little more space...

That's enough.

You don't have to carry the day in your body.

You can let some of it go.

What Stays With You

Teaching isn't just practical.

It's emotional.

Throughout the day...
you're constantly tuning in to others...

Noticing behaviour...
responding to needs...
holding the room...

And often...
your own feelings get pushed to one side,
just so you can keep going.

But they don't disappear.

They stay... quietly... underneath everything else.

You don't have to carry it all.

Just Notice What's There

Before trying to understand anything...

just notice...

What are you feeling right now?

It might be:

- frustration
- overwhelm
- irritation
- sadness
- pressure

Or something harder to name.

That's okay.

You don't need the perfect word.

Give It a Name

Sometimes just naming a feeling can reduce its intensity.

You might quietly say to yourself:

"I feel..."

Or simply recognise it.

There's no need to explain it.

Just acknowledge it.

Naming softens what you feel.

What's Sitting With You

What feels like it's stayed with you today?

This image shows a blank sheet of white paper with ten horizontal dashed lines spaced evenly apart, resembling notebook paper. The lines are light gray and extend across the width of the page. There is no handwriting or other markings on the paper.

Let it come out gently.

What's Yours — and What Isn't

Throughout the day...

you absorb a lot.

Other people's emotions... energy...
reactions...
expectations...

And not all of it belongs to you.

You don't have to hold onto everything you've picked up.

Not everything is yours to carry

Let Some of It Go

You might want to note:

- what feels like yours
- what might not be

Or simply write:

What can I release?

You can release what isn't yours

Let It Shift

You don't need to push feelings away.

And you don't need to hold onto them tightly either.

Just allowing them to be there...

can begin to change them.

Emotions move when they're given space.

Even slightly.

It can soften from here.

Let This Be Enough

You don't need to process everything.

You don't need to understand it all.

Even a small moment of awareness...

can make a difference.

You're allowed to feel...

and also let go...

You don't have to carry it forward.

Leaving the Day Behind

At the end of a teaching day...

it's not always clear where it finishes.

Your mind can still be holding it...

your body can still feel it...

something emotional might still be there...

So instead of carrying it forward...

this is where you begin to close it.

Not perfectly.

Just enough.

The day can end here.

What Can Stay Behind

You don't need to take everything with you.

Some things can stay with today.

You might notice:

- something unfinished
- something that didn't go as planned
- something still sitting in your mind

You don't need to resolve it now.

Just allow it to stay here.

Not everything needs to come with you.

Earth

Let It Land Here

You might want to write:

- one thing you're leaving behind
- one thing that can wait
- one thing you're letting go of [illegible]

It doesn't have to be carried forward.

The Day Is Done

There will always be more you could do.

More to plan...
more to think about...
more to prepare...

But today is complete.

You did what you could with what you had.

And that is enough for today.

Today is done.

Step Into Your Evening

Now begins a different part of your day.

One that isn't about teaching.

You don't have to stay in "work mode".

Even if part of your mind tries to go back...

you can gently bring yourself forward.

Into your evening... your space...

your life outside of work.

You are more than your role.

Take This With You

You don't need a complete reset.

Just a small shift.

A little more space...

a little less weight...

a little more of yourself back.

That's enough.

Take that into your evening.

You don't have to carry it all.

Closing

A Final Note

If you've made it here...
just pause for a moment.

At the beginning...
this was about finding a way to step out of the day.

And you've done that...
even slightly.

You don't have to carry everything.
Not every thought...
not every feeling...
not every moment from today.

Some of it can stay where it belongs.

And even if nothing feels completely different... something may have shifted...
A little more space...
a little less weight...
a quieter moment in your mind...
That's enough.

You don't need to do this perfectly.
You can come back to this... whenever you need it.

Before school...
during the day...
after... or when things begin to build again.

This isn't something to get right.
It's something to return to.

You don't have to carry it all.

© Awaken Discovery 2026.

All rights reserved.

This journal is for personal reflection and wellbeing support and is not a substitute for medical, psychological, or therapeutic care.